A Worthy Tribute to a Great Man.

At the memorial meeting at Glasgow last week Mr. John Sandig delivered the following address:

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen—I desire to give expression to a thought that comes to me upon this occasion. A few giant minds, heroes, the really great men of the earth, have been able to crystallize and send ringing down the centuries in one short sentence the accomplishments of their whole life.

When Cressa had conquered the Gauls on the plains of France, he sent the Roman Senate this message: "I came, I saw, I conquered." It tells the story of the man's life; for it was his mission to conquer the enemies of Rome—and at last, Rome itself. When Nelson went to the battle of Trafalgar, he signaled this message to his fleet: "England expects every man to do his duty." It was Nelson's glory to defend England's supremacy of the seas against combined Europe. When Perry had won the battle of Lake Erie, he sent to the Congress of the United States this message: "We have met the enemy and they are ours." It was his mission to announce to the world that a new power had taken its place among nations and that the young giant of the West would not be denied. When Schley sailed out of Chesapeake Bay to go in search of Cervera, he flew from his mast-head this message: "Remember the Maine." How well he remembered it and avenged it, the story of the 3rd of July tells.

These were great messages, the crowning point in the lives of heroes, but when compared with the message sent by Gov. Goebel from his death bed: "Tell my friends to be brave, fearless and loyal to the cause of the common people," they sink into insignificance, for he sought to break the shackles that bind to industrial slavery the great common people. That was his message and his mission in life.

WANTED!

Reliable man for Manager of Branch Office I wish to open in this vicinity. Good opening for an energetic, sober man. Kindly mention this paper when writing. A. T. Morris, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Illustrated catalogue 4 cts. postage.

Are You Married? Then

Never both be angry at once.
Never taunt with a past mistake
Never allow a request to be repeated.

Never meet without a loving welcome.
Never forget the happy hours of early love.

Never talk at one another, either alone or in company.
Neglect the whole world beside rather than one another.

Never let the sun go down upon thy anger or grievance.
Never speak loudly to one another unless the house is on fire.

Let each one strive to yield oftenest to the wishes of the other.
Never make a remark at the expense of each other—it is a mean-ness.

Never sigh over what might have been, but make the most of what is.
Never part for a day without loving words to think of during absence.

There is no better medicine for the babies than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Its pleasant taste and prompt and effectual cures make it a favorite with mothers and small children. It quickly cures their coughs and colds, preventing pneumonia or other serious consequences. It also cures croup and has been used in tens of thousands of cases without a single failure so far as we have been able to learn. It not only cures croup, but when given as soon as the croupy cough appears, will prevent the attack. In cases of whooping cough it liquefies the tough mucus, making it easier to expectorate, and lessens the severity and frequency of the paroxysms of coughing, thus depriving that disease of all dangerous consequences. For sale by M. Cravens.

FROM TEXAS.

HILLSBORO, TEX., Feb. 9, 1900.

Editor of the News:

More than one year ago I left my home in old Adair county to try my luck and to battle with chance for my fortune in the wild west. During the entire time I have been here your newswheet, which so thoroughly chronicles the interesting items of Adair and adjoining counties, has been a source of much information and pleasure to me, and I feel that a few words from this typical Texan town, composed of so many Kentuckians, might be of at least passing interest to some of your readers.

Hillsboro is an enterprising, prosperous little city of 10,000 inhabitants, situated almost midway between Waco and—, and about equidistant from Ft. Worth and Dallas. It is in the heart of the famous Black Belt of country which extends entirely across the State. This belt of country is very fertile and well adapted to the production of almost anything from Johnson grass to cotton. Though for many years past cotton has been almost the only crop cultivated, the farmers are now awaking to the fact that a diversification of crops is their only hope for salvation from debt, cotton and starvation. Consequently a great deal of wheat was sown last fall, and at present the prospects are very flattering for a fine yield.

Hillsboro has a number of paying enterprises. Among them are the large roller mill, a cotton seed oil mill, three large seed warehouses, a fine cotton compress, a power house, extensive water-works, together with a number of smaller enterprises. The shops of the M. K. & T. R. R. are also located here. In the town there are two daily and three weekly papers. All of them are strictly Democratic except two. One of these is a "middle of the road" Populist, the other a gold standard Democratic organ. This last paper draws its political convictions from the Democratic(?) organ of the State, the Dallas News. One thing, however, we Kentuckians might commend the News. It sent a special correspondent to Frankfort during the recent contest in that city, the proceedings of which have been watched with great interest by all ex-Kentuckians and others as well. The people who are in the midst of the political struggle can have no idea what interest the citizens of other States watch every proceeding and what peculiar suppositions they entertain for the final result of every movement made by the opposing party. Even before last year's election in Kentucky took place observers here had become anxious for the success of Mr. Goebel. His famous election law was studied in its every phase by the leading politicians of this State, and while there were those who condemned it, it was in the main thought to be a just measure. After the election, when it became evident that a contest would follow, men who before were anxious for his success were willing to wager that he would win in the end. While there are some who rejoice to see the good name and lofty prestige of the grand old State disgraced by this unfortunate state of affairs, the better informed deplore the unparalleled tragedy and believe that a peaceful settlement of the difficulty will be reached without further bloodshed.

I am often asked if I am not ashamed to claim Kentucky as my native State, to which I proudly and with pleasure reply negatively. I am proud that I am a Kentuckian, and I believe that her patriotic statesmen will guide her grand old ship of state safely over the threatening rapids of the political sea, and land her triumphantly in the harbor of universal peace and prosperity. Entertaining that wish, I am respectfully,
